Advice when travelling through Chuo City

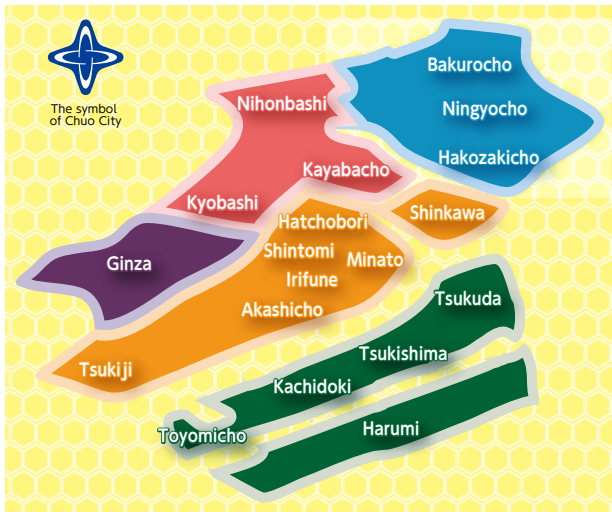

As its name suggests, Chuo City is located near the center of the 23 special wards of Tokyo. It is a linear region that spreads along the right bank of Sumida River downstream from the Ryogokubashi Bridge. Most of its terrain has few differences in altitude as it was formed by landfill projects that have been going on since the Edo period.

In addition to the Yaesu Exit at JR Tokyo Station, which is the gateway to the land, Chuo City also has the Tokyo City Air Terminal in Hakozaicho, Nihonbashi, which is the gateway to the sky.

The subway is useful for those who want to see all of Chuo City. 9 train lines travel extensively throughout the city and stop at a total of 29 stations. There are also plenty of buses that you can take to various destinations.

However, it is highly recommend that you walk whenever possible and take your time enjoying all of the sights in Chuo City. This way, you can be sure to enjoy new surprises, pleasant discoveries, and delicious food.

Here, the 37 towns of this great city will be introduced in five divided areas.

Please be sure to use this convenient form of transportation in Chuo City

Chuo City Community Bus "Edo"

Taking the Edo Bus is a convenient and affordable way of sightseeing in Chuo City at just ¥100 for adults and children (free for preschool-aged children). It departs every twenty minutes from the Chuo City Office and has both a south loop and north loop. Transit IC cards can also be used to get onboard.

Nihonbashi

① Tokiwabashi Gate ruins C-2

(important national cultural asset)

It was an important outer gate that led to the Otemon Gate in front of Edo Castle. Today, only the stone walls of the Masugata-mon-style gate remain. This gate was called Asakusaguchi and Oteguchi and was known as one of the five entrances to Edo as it served as an entrance on the way to locations such as Nikko and Oshu, passing through Asakusa and Senju.

② The Main Building of the Head Office of the Bank of Japan C-2

(important national cultural asset)

The Main Building of the Head Office of the Bank of Japan is a stone structure of Neo-Baroque architecture, built in 1896. It is said to have been designed after the National Bank of Belgium by architect Kingo Tatsuno after having inspected the architecture of various banks in the West. It is made of masonry bricks three floors above ground and one floor below ground, and is characterized by its solid design surrounded by other structures. The Main Building of the Head Office of the Bank of Japan was built where the gold guild was located in the Edo period.

③ Kidai Shoran picture scroll C-3

A replica of the Kidai Shoran picture scroll stretches seventeen meters on the wall of the underground concourse at Mitsukoshi-mae Station on the Tokyo Metro Line. The Kidai Shoran is a picture scroll that depicts the prosperous culture that the townspeople enjoyed in the Edo period on the eastern side of the grand road (today's Chuo-dori Street) from Nihonbashi to Imagwabashi around 1805.

④ Nihonbashi Mitsukoshi Main Store / Mitsukoshi Theater C-3

It began when the Echigoya drapery opened in Nihonbashi during the Edo period. It then declared itself a department store in 1904 and became the first department store in Japan known as the Mitsukoshi Gofuku Store. The world's first theater in a department store then opened in 1927 under the name "Mitsukoshi Hall".

⑤ Nihombashi Takashimaya C-3

(important national cultural asset)

It became the first department store to be designated as an Important National Cultural Asset in 2009. Designed by Teitaro Takahashi in 1933, it was newly built to include cooling and heating throughout the building. It underwent extension work by Dogo Murano after the war and is evaluated as an architectural structure that is an inseparable entirety.

① Nihonbashi Bridge, Road Marker C-3

(important national cultural asset)

Nihonbashi Bridge is said to have first been built in 1603. The following year, it served as the starting point of the five routes of Edo and became the center of Japan and the symbol of Edo's prosperity. When entering the Meiji period, the center of the bridge was specified as the starting point of the national routes, and a plate reading "Road Origin Marker of Japan" is still fixed there. The bridge that stands today is a double-arched stone bridge that was completed in 1911. The "Nihonbashi Tourism Information" was also opened at the flower area on the west side of the Minamizume in July 2017. Next to it stands the Nihonbashi Yurai no Hi monument.

⑤ Ozu Washi Museum C-2

On display here are materials such as valuable antique writings that have been gathered ever since the separation from Matsuzaka in the Ise province and starting of the paper wholesaling business in Edo.

⑥ Mitsui Main Building C-2

(important national cultural asset)

Designated as an Important National Cultural Asset in 1998, this structure represents the early Showa period and is well worth seeing with its Corinthian columns outside and grand space with Doric columns and open ceiling on the first floor.

⑦ Mitsui Memorial Museum C-2

A museum with about 4,000 excellent works of art of Japan and other areas of Asia gathered since the Edo era by the Mitsui Family.

② The birthplace of the Nihonbashi Fish Market C-3

The Nihonbashi Uogashi is said to have started when seafood products were lined up on itabune boards to be sold. There is a monument reminding us that there was an Uogashi in Nihonbashi before it was burned down during the Great Kanto Earthquake and relocated to Tsukiji. Next to the monument is a statue designed after Princess Otohime, signifying all of the fish in the sea that are residents of Ryugu Castle gathering at Nihonbashi.

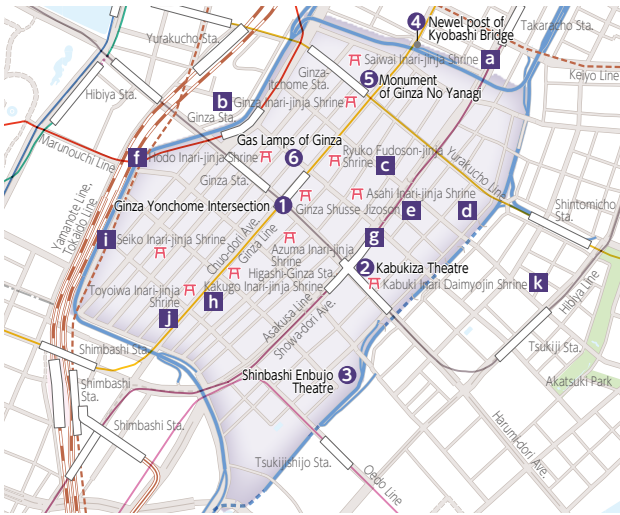

③ Currency Museum C-3

A museum that lets you study all about money with displays covering everything from ancient Japanese money to the birth of the current yen, as well as currency and rare moneys of the world.

④ National Film Archive of Japan C-4

Film used in Japanese and foreign movies and other movie-related items are on display, included in projects, and screened.

Ginza

③ Shinbashi Enbujo Theatre B-6

Based on the songs, dances, and dance theaters of Kyoto and Osaka, it was opened in 1925 to improve and present the skills of Shinbashi's geishas. In addition to Azuma Dance performances given by Shinbashi's geishas in early summer every year, this theater holds a wide variety of performances such as Kabuki and new school theater.

① Ginza Yonchome Intersection B-5

The intersection of Yonchome, which is the symbol of Ginza. The Wako Clock Tower is known as the landmark of Ginza.

④ Newel post of Kyobashi Bridge B-4 (cultural asset of the city)

It is said that the Kyobashi and Nihonbashi bridges were both built in the same year (1603). They were made of wood during the Edo period but became stone arch bridges in 1901. They were dismantled during the landfill projects at Kyobashi River, which took place over the course of forty years from 1963. There are three stone newel posts that still remain today on the walkway of Chuo-dori Street. The two with the Giboshi ornaments were made in 1875.

⑤ Monument of Ginza's Yanagi B-5

When Ginza Brick Street was completed, it was lined with planted trees such as pine trees, maple trees, and cherry trees. However, all but the willows died. Since then, willows have disappeared from Ginza several times due to road-widening projects and fires, but have returned to cover the streets with green once again thanks to the effort of the local residents.

⑥ Gas Lamps of Ginza B-5

Four restored gas lamps are lit at the Gas Lamp Street in Ginza Sancho-me. They commemorate the eighty-five gas lamps that lit the streets of Ginza during the Meiji period. Ginza was a pioneering town in the age of cultural enlightenment, but the shift from paper lanterns to gas lamps must have come as a surprise to many people back then.

② Kabukiza Theatre B-5

Here, Kabuki plays are presented all throughout the year and, as its name suggests, is the main theater for Kabuki. The original theater first opened in 1889. It was a plush Western-style wooden structure that was at the forefront of its time. It was then destroyed during the war and rebuilt in 1951. The 5th Kabukiza, which opened in April 2013, carried on the exterior and interior of the much-loved 4th Kabukiza as it became the face of the GINZA KABUKIZA complex facility, which is equipped with state-of-the-art facilities, a theater house, and the Kabukiza Tower, which is an office tower. On the fifth floor of the tower is the "Kabukiza Gallery", which is a cultural facility themed on Kabuki, and the rooftop garden above the theater house.

① Hama-rikyu Gardens A-7・B-7

(designated as a Place of Special Scenic Beauty / Special Historic Spot)

A garden that was a Shogun family villa and still retains some remnants of the Daimyo garden, with a seawater pond and duck hunting site. It was a falconry spot of the Shogun family in the early Edo period, and was called Kofu Hama-yashiki when Lord Tsunashige of the Kofu domain received it as a residence from the fourth Shogun, Ietsuna. It later became a Shogun family villa named Hama-goten when Ienobu became the sixth Shogun. In 1870, it was then placed under control of the Imperial Household Ministry and served as a garden for the Imperial Household under the name Hama-rikyu. Finally, it became open to the public after the war, and designated as National Special Place of Scenic Beauty and Special Historic Spot in 1952.

⑤ Tsukiji Outer Market C-6

The Tsukiji Outer Market, which thrives as the wholesale town of Tsukiji, is lined with about 400 shops that offer not only fresh seafood products, but other products related to eating and drinking as well.

⑥ Teppozu Inari-jinja Shrine D-5

(cultural asset of the city)

It was called "Minato Inari" during the Edo period as it was located in front of the river near Inari Bridge at a "minato (port)" where foreign cargo vessels passed, but was later relocated to its current spot when the foreign settlement in Tsukiji was established. The "cold water bathing ritual", which worshippers participate in for purification and good health, is held every January. The Grand Festival is also held in May.

⑦ Tsukiji Catholic Church D-6

(cultural asset of the city)

Established at the foreign settlement in Tsukiji in 1874 following the churches in Nagasaki and Yokohama. The original structure was built in 1878, but rebuilt in 1927 in the style of the Greek Parthenon with inspiration from La Madeleine in Paris, as it was burned down in the Great Kanto Earthquake.

② Tsukiji Hongwanji Temple C-6 (important national cultural asset)

A branch of Nishi-hongwanji Temple in Kyoto, which was built in 1617. The monks' quarters were located near Yokoyama-cho at first, but relocated to Tsukiji in 1679 after they burned down in the Great Fire of Meireki. The Main Hall, which was damaged during the Great Kanto Earthquake, was redesigned by Chuta Ito and rebuilt in 1934 as an ancient Indian-style stone structure. It was designated as an Important National Cultural Asset in 2014.

③ Namiyoke-jinja Shrine C-6

Built as a guardian shrine for the completion of the landfill project of Tsukiji from 1658 to 1661, which was difficult due to ocean waves. The rainwater bowl and male/female lion heads at Namiyoke-jinja Shrine are registered as Tangible Assets of Folk Culture in the ward. The lion festivals of this shrine have been famous since the Edo period, and during the main Tsukiji Lion Festival, which is held every three years, one of the two grand lions are carried through the Tsukiji area along with a portable shrine.

④ Eitai Bridge E-4

(important national cultural asset)

Said to have been built in commemoration of the fiftieth birthday of the fifth Shogun Tsuneyoshi Tokugawa, it used to be located 150 meters upstream from where it stands now. The bridge that stands today is an arch bridge that was built in 1926. When it is lit up, it is magnificent, with blue lights as the sun sets.

① Monument for the site of "The Beginning of Dutch Studies" C-6

(cultural asset of the city)

The mansion of the Okudaira Family of the Nakatsura Domain in Buzen Province (today's Oita Prefecture) was once located here, where the domain physician and Dutch scholar Ryotaku Maeno translated the Dutch medical book "Anatomische Tabellen" and published "The New Book of Anatomy". The great deal of effort that went into this is described in "Beginning of Dutch Studies" by Genpaku Sugita.

⑫ Oiwa Inari Tamiya-jinja Shrine D-4

A shrine that was built in 1879, which carries on the tradition of Oiwa, who is the main character in the play "Tokaido Yotsuya Kaidan". The stone gate next to the main hall remains the same as it was when it was built in 1897. The hundred times marker stone on the ground, which was dedicated by the 4th Udanji Ichikawa, who played Oiwa at the Naniwa-za in Osaka, is the oldest hundred times marker stone in the ward, and is registered as Tangible Assets of Folk Culture in the ward along with the stone gate.

⑧ Chuo Historical Museum / Planetarium C-6 (Time Dome Akashi)

Includes a regular exhibition room for regional materials, a planetarium, and city resident gallery. It is a facility for those interested in interacting with subjects such as history, art, and astronomy.

⑨ Teusler Memorial House C-6

(cultural asset of the city)

Teusler Memorial House was built in 1933 as a home for missionaries of Saint Luke's International Hospital. The two-storey structure is made of reinforced concrete characterized by its pillars and beams on the outside and stately wooden interior and stairway. It was relocated and restored in 1998, but still shows what it was like when it was originally built.

⑩ Water gauge at Reiganjima Tide Station D-5

(historic site of the city)

The mean sea level of Tokyo Bay observed at the water gauge at Reiganjima Tide Station, which was installed at the mouth of Sumida River in 1873, was the standard when determining altitudes in the Tokyo area. The current Reiganjima Gauging Station was relocated roughly thirty-six meters downstream in 1994, with its symbolic column placed at the old site.

8 Ogannonji Temple / Cast-iron bodhisattva head D-2-3

The cast-iron bodhisattva head at Ogannonji Temple is believed to have been made during the Kamakura period. It is fifty four centimeters in facial width and a designated cultural asset of the city. It was originally at Shin-Kiyomizudera Temple in Kamakura, but there was a fire disaster in the Kamakura period and only the head could be dug out from the ruins. It was removed from Kamakura following the ordinance to separate Shintoism and Buddhism, and finally enshrined at its current location in 1876.

9 Bettara Market D-2

A stylish autumn tradition that has been passed down since the Keicho period. It is a lively event that is held every year on October 19 and 20 where the area between Takarada-Ebisu-jinja Shrine to Suginomori-jinja Shrine is lined with stalls that sell Bettarazuke pickles.

10 Suitengu Shrine E-3

A shrine that is a branch of the main shrine of the same name in Kurume City, Fukuoka Prefecture for the safe delivery of children, avoidance of floods, and business activities related to water. The Suitengu Shrine of Nihonbashi was established when lord Yorinari Arima of the Kurume Domain requested the division of the deity of the shrine with his residence in Mita (today's Minato Ward) in Edo.
